MANCHESTER'S LGBTQ+ FILM AND TV FESTIVAL

SCENE 2026 ran for its third year from Thursday 20th August – Thursday 27th August celebrating queer stories on screen. The festival took over the city, proudly working with programming, accommodation and venue partners from the Manchester and worldwide.

The festival champions brand new and classic works from narrative to documentary, features to shorts, Mancunian and international. At SCENE we're proud to screen a diverse programme of stories and welcome creatives from all over the world.

Running during Manchester's Pride season (which unusually is in August), SCENE has raised tens of thousands of pounds for local LGBTQ+ charities since 2024. SCENE creates safe spaces for members of the community, allies and fans to explore relevant topics and make connections with LGBTQ+ heritage and culture through Film & TV, as well as a place for queer filmmakers and talent to meet and share inspiration.

SCENE is produced by CityCo on behalf of Manchester Accommodation Business Improvement District. Whilst Mancunians love the festival, over a third of our audience comes from outside Manchester with attendees this year from as far as Australia.

SCENE 2026

After launching in 2024 with a Queer As Folk UK cast reunion and welcoming stars like Julie Hesmondhalgh and legendary American documentarian David Weissman, our second edition in 2025 doubled our audience, welcoming the cast of What It Feels Like For A Girl and RuPaul's Drag Race creators Randy Barbato and Fenton Bailey.

Our third edition in 2026 was our most ambitious yet with a packed programme and attendance close to doubling again.

Russell T Davies returned to celebrate Tip Toe and mark the fifth anniversary of It's A Sin. Our TV strand also included a behind-the-scenes look at Disney+'s Rivals with cast and producers, an in-conversation with Heartstopper creator Alice Oseman, a celebration of I Kissed A Boy and I Kissed A Girl, and a Traitors event.

Channel 4's First For Funny live comedy night returned with Taskmaster star Chloe Petts headlining alongside celebrations of Absolutely Fabulous and Caroline Aherne.

Our film programme included previews of Pedro Almodóvar's Bitter Christmas, Jane Schoenbrun's Queer Palm-winning Teenage Sex and Death at Camp Miasma, Gregg Araki's I Want Your Sex and John Early's Maddie's Secret, while our SCENE Documentary strand featured the UK premiere of NOFX: 40 Years of F*ckin' Up.

The Iris Prize Best British short nominations were announced at the festival whilst our Queer Northern Shorts programme returned alongside guest programming from Dublin's Trans Image Trans Experience Festival, Aks International Minorities Festival, Queer Filmmakers Network and more. We also hosted a free outdoor screen and the Dragged to the Movies photography exhibition, extending the festival across the city.

The festival closed with Manchester filmmakers Neil Ely and Lloyd Eyre-Morgan's Chatlines, sponsored by Screen Manchester, and activist documentary, Hunky Jesus.

OUR AUDIENCE

Here in Manchester, we're one of the UK's most exciting destinations for brands and media companies looking to connect with a vibrant, diverse, and growing LGBTQ+ community. Today, 65% of companies prioritise Manchester alongside or even ahead of London for media campaigns. For brands aiming to engage both the media industry and a forward thinking LGBTQ+ audience, Manchester offers meaningful opportunities to connect with an influential and passionate community.

SCENE Manchester's LGBTQ+ Film and TV Festival is the perfect platform to tap into this energy. We connect brands with a highly engaged audience eager for inclusive storytelling, cultural connection, and memorable experiences. Manchester is home to one of the UK's oldest queer communities who party and protest side by side and many in our audience seek deeper connections to LGBTQ+ community and history through our festival.

Behind the scenes, Manchester's media industry is thriving. As well as being the new home of the TV Festival, Manchester has world-class production facilities, infrastructure and creative talent, the city is a hub of innovation. The BBC and ITV call MediaCityUK home, Channel 4 recently moved into our city and top film and TV production regularly use us as a backdrop. Loved by both global streaming giants and homegrown producers, Manchester has become a powerhouse of the new creative revolution.

With a proud legacy of LGBTQ+ activism and a warm, northern welcome, Manchester is both a cultural and commercial hub. More than 1 in 10 Mancunians identify as LGBTQ+, contributing to a UK market worth over £6 billion annually. This makes Manchester not only a fantastic place to live and work, but a prime location for brands looking to make authentic connections with an audience that values representation, diversity, and an unmistakable spirit of "everybody welcome."
